

Chicago State University Task Force on Open Access Members

Fatemeh Asadi -- Director of Library Public Services, Library and Instruction Services, Chicago State University.

Dr. Asadi is the chair of the Scholarly Communication Steering Committee. Before joining CSU, chaired "Health Information Management Department (Ph.D. & Master level) in the Iran Medical University, School of Medical Information Science; taught Library & Information Science; was the advisor of more than 40 theses and dissertations; authored books and articles; member of the editorial Board of a peer reviewed Quarterly Journal of Medical Information Management.

Paula Carney's -- Assistant Provost for Graduate and Professional Studies in Academic Affairs, Chicago State University.

Dr. Carney joined Chicago State University in 2013. She maintains an adjunct appointment at Northwestern University's Feinberg School of Medicine. Her academic interests include the use of learning sciences and technologies in both the career development of healthcare researchers and community health education. She conducts research and facilitates infrastructure development to reduce health disparities in domestic and global settings.

Richard Darga (Chair) -- Dean of Library and Instruction Services, Chicago State University.

Dr. Darga, has been the Library and Instruction Services Dean since 2010 and before that, he was the Associate Dean for Technology and Learning Resources. In addition to his work as Dean he has taught education leadership courses and qualitative and quantitative research methods for Chicago State University and Resurrection University. Prior to coming to Chicago State University he has been a Chief Information Officer and a Director of Behavior Health in Michigan.

Deborah Harper Brown -- Clinical Associate Professor, Pharmacy Practice, Chicago State University.

Dr. Harper-Brown has both classroom and practice site teaching responsibilities for Doctor of Pharmacy (Pharm.D.) students. She also delivers direct patient care through a pharmacist-managed ambulatory clinic. Dr. Harper-Brown has authored and co-authored several articles in peer-reviewed, professional publications and is currently a member of the editorial board of the American Journal of Pharmaceutical Education.

Rong Lucy He -- Associate Professor, Department of Biological Sciences, College of Arts & Science, Chicago State University.

Dr. He mainly teaches human physiology and immunology courses. She is a graduate faculty and actively involved in the undergraduate/graduate student research work. Her research interests focus on the mechanisms of immune cell activation and inactivation, and how to use the mathematical model to solve biological questions. Dr. He authored and published several articles in professional publications.

Suyu Lin -- Assistant Professor, Department of Information Studies, College of Education, Chicago State University.

Dr. Lin's research interests focus on information policies; institutional repositories and digital preservation; records and knowledge management and international librarianship, as reflected in her publications and scholarly presentations. She is chair of Archives and Records Management (ARM) Committee.

Brenda Pruitt- ANNISSETTE -- Assistant Professor and Assistant Professor and Coordinator of School Library Programs, Information Studies Department, Chicago State University,

Dr. Pruitt-Annisette specializes in the area of K-12 supervision and administration. Her research interest's focus on teacher preparation programs and quality practicum and internships needed to ensure that candidates (especially school librarians) are prepared to develop, deliver, and assess quality teaching and learning experiences for K-12 learners in 21st century classrooms and school libraries. She currently serves on Faculty Senate.

Charlene Snelling -- Assistant Professor, Coordinator of Reference and Instruction Services, Library and Instruction Services, Chicago State University.

Professor Snelling prior to the position at Chicago State University worked as an acquisition librarian at the University of Illinois Health Sciences library. She has attended the University of Illinois at Urbana while enrolled in the doctoral program of Educational Leadership and Organization. She has research interest in reference and user services, all forms of literacy including information literacy, consumer and health literacy, consumer health, alternative medicine modalities including yoga. She is past president of Chicago Chapter of the International Reading Association.

Mr. Michael Sukowski -- Director of Center for Teaching and Research Excellence, Library and Instruction Services, Chicago State University

Mr. Sukowski guides the present and future direction of the Center and is directly involved in grants, faculty development, online learning, and special projects. Recent publications and presentations include: The Changing Learner (The Strategic Management of Higher Education: Serving Students as Customers for Institutional Growth); Come and Get Fed: A CAFÉ Experience of Professional Development for Faculty at Concordia University Chicago, and Reaching the Tipping Point: The Interconnectedness of a School Leadership Program.

Steve Wallace -- Graduate Student, Chicago State University.

Lucinda Boyd -- Graduate Student, Chicago State University.

Non Voting Members:

Holly Falk-Krzesinski -- Vice President, Global Academic and Research Relations, Elsevier, Chicago, IL.

Dr. Falk-Krzesinski focuses on strategic initiatives, partnerships and stakeholder needs at research institutions and federal funding agencies. Her engagement activities emphasize collaboration opportunities related to scholarly communication, research development, research information management and strategic planning for the research enterprise. She continues as a faculty member at Northwestern University where she teaches grantsmanship courses